

Mrs. Wilson Finds a Country Woman Mixing Vegetables in Appetizing Ways

She Also Has a Clever Method of Cooking Two Kinds That Are to Be Used Separately in the Same Container

DOWN on a farm this fall, many miles from the hum of the busy thoroughfares of cities, I found a New England housewife who had many unusual ideas of serving the coarse and ordinary vegetables that quickly brought them into the kitchen. She was a thrifty housewife. To be sure, more vegetables at one time in the same pot by the simple means of placing each variety in a piece of cheesecloth which she kept for this special purpose. Nor does she throw away the drain pipes that water in which the vegetables were cooked. Mrs. Elmer Downes, whom everybody knows for miles around as "Dorcas" has a firm belief that if we eat more vegetables than we do we would enjoy better health. But it is better that you should read her opinion, which is as follows:

"Many years ago I felt that perhaps the family would be much better if I could manage to give them more vegetables and a little better. I know my husband would surely relish them, but I saw just a variety of spinach, turnips, cabbage, carrots and beans, with beets, carrots, spinach and turnips, soon became very monotonous, so I began working up different dishes, and flavoring them with these vegetables. My family really never tire of them because I alternate with these vegetables served in the usual manner."

"I generally use a wooden chopping bowl and the double chopping knife for mincing both the meat, suet and vegetables."

Mrs. Downes' Vegetable Pudding
Pare and chop fine
Two carrots
Two small turnips
One cup of green tops of celery
Five medium-sized onions
One-half pound of salt pork
Six branches of parsley
Turn into a mixing bowl and add
One and one-fourth cups of flour
One teaspoon of salt
One teaspoon of white pepper
One tablespoon of baking powder
One-half teaspoon of thyme
Two cups of stale bread which has been soaked in cold water and then pressed dry
Two well-beaten eggs
Mix well and then dip pudding cloth in boiling water, wring dry and rub well with shortening, then with flour. Turn in pudding and tie securely. Now plunge into a large pot of boiling water and boil for one hour. Add other vegetables such as potatoes, cabbage or turnips and cook until the vegetables are tender. Lift the pudding to a colander to drain. While the pudding is draining season the other vegetables and place them in a border on a hot platter. Turn the pudding in the center and cover the pudding with minced parsley.

"To make cheese sauce: Make one and one-half cups of cream sauce and then season and add
One-half cup of grated cheese
One-half teaspoon of paprika
Boiled Ham and Vegetable Harlequin
Wash the butt of ham and then place in a large boiler covered with cold water. Bring to a boil slowly and then cook, allowing thirty minutes to the pound. Then pare and slice
Six turnips
Four large carrots
Place in a cheesecloth bag and drop in with the ham. Place the required potatoes in cheesecloth bag and cook in the same manner. Now just before serving lift the ham and cut a large piece of fat on the ham and return the ham to the boiler. Mince the fat

MRS. WILSON'S ANSWERS
My dear Mrs. Wilson—Would appreciate your advising me the cause of the sugar rising to the surface of the jelly after it has been left standing for about a week. Also what may I do to prevent this from happening? MRS. A. C.
This trouble is caused by incorrect proportions or too long boiling, so that the sugar is cooked again by the crystallizing point. Heating the sugar when making jelly will also cause this. The remedy is correct proportion and less boiling.

My dear Mrs. Wilson—I boiled grape jelly for twenty-five minutes and it did not jell. Reboiled it and added gelatin and it still did not jell. Can you suggest a remedy? M. V. O.
I am sorry, but your trouble in the first place was due to either that the grapes were overripe or that you did not add sufficient water to bring the juice to a desired mixture that would give the best results in making jelly. Now that you have added the gelatin nothing can be done to retrieve this mixture, and if you can use it for sauces it will be about all you can do with it.

GARDEN PIE
Pare and dice
Four medium-sized potatoes
Two medium-sized carrots
Four medium-sized turnips
Four medium-sized onions

One cup of milk
One cup of liquid drained from tomatoes
One-half cup of flour
Stir to dissolve the flour and then bring to a boil and cook for five minutes. Add
One and one-half teaspoons of salt
